

We continually strive to close gaps in cultural capital for our children versus children nationally. An important area of development is that we identify 'key facts' in every subject - facts we want children to know through studying an area of learning. Having such knowledge allows children to gain other knowledge more easily, as they have a 'hook' to hang new learning from.

As a result, we have dedicated staff training time to create 'Golden Nuggets'. These 'Key Facts' will be shared and displayed in the classroom, so children have a constant reference point. The Golden Nuggets will identify significant people, pivotal moments, major changes, or developments as well as other general knowledge pertinent to the areas being studied.

Examples of Golden Nuggets on display in school:

